The information contained on this site does not constitute legal advice and is presented without any representation or warranty whatsoever, including as to accuracy or completeness. This website should not be used as a substitute for competent legal advice from a licensed attorney. Readers should not act on information contained on this website without seeking legal counsel.

Transmittal of information from or to this site or any use of electronic mail is not intended to create, and receipt of it by you or by us does not establish, an attorney-client relationship between Albers and Albers and anyone else. Do not send us information until you speak with one of our attorneys and receive authorization to send it to us. If you would like an attorney to contact you, please use our Contact Us form. We will get back to you and let you know how to proceed. When you receive and enter into an engagement letter from one of our lawyers, you will then be our client, and we may exchange information freely. Prior to that time, you should assume that any information you send to us would not be kept confidential by us and would not be subject to any attorney-client privilege and would be treated as non-proprietary.

If any communication from this site is not in conformity with the rules and regulations of any state governing lawyer conduct, Albers & Albers will not accept representation which is based on such communication. The hiring of a lawyer is an important decision that should not be based solely upon advertisements. Before you decide, ask us to send you free written information about our qualifications and experience.
